

Your Idaho's Bounty Cooperative

What does it mean to belong to a Cooperative?

The Idaho's Bounty Co-op, Inc., (IBC) was created as a Cooperative form of business as opposed to a private corporation or partnership for many reasons.

IBC is a Cooperative form of business incorporated under a non-profit statute operating solely for the benefit of its members. Each member purchases an equal stock share in the business and is entitled to an equal vote. The Board of Directors is responsible for setting the direction of the Co-op, hiring key employees and managing their progress. They meet quarterly if not more often based on the bylaws.

We are a community owned and operated Co-op focusing on enhancing the economic, environmental, social and nutritional health of our local communities through the sales and distribution of sustainable, locally produced and prepared foods and non-food items via a web based ordering system.

All profits that are generated by the Co-op are used for the benefit of the members. The Board determines whether to put those monies back into the business and/or to pay a patronage fee to members.

There are four main values that we refer to for everything we do; Community, Sustainability, Integrity, and Openness. We strive to also focus on three key benefits to all members; Quality, Value, and Convenience. Most of these are inclusive of the National Cooperative Principals that we have pledged to follow, but we chose to prioritize some of them for our specific Co-op.

The definition of a cooperative is an autonomous association of persons united voluntarily to meet their common economic, social, and cultural needs and aspirations through a jointly-owned and democratically-controlled enterprise.

Idaho's Bounty has joined together to serve the growth and long term health of farmers, ranchers, chefs and market gardeners by developing a sustainable network that supports the promotion and distribution of organic, all-natural, and fair trade food to our region.

Cooperatives are based on the values of self-help, self-responsibility, democracy, equality, equity, and solidarity. In the tradition of their founders, cooperative members believe in the ethical values of honesty, openness, social responsibility, and caring for others. The principals are as follows.

Your Idaho's Bounty Cooperative

What does it mean to belong to a Cooperative?

The Idaho's Bounty Co-op, Inc., (IBC) was created as a Cooperative form of business as opposed to a private corporation or partnership for many reasons.

IBC is a Cooperative form of business incorporated under a non-profit statute operating solely for the benefit of its members. Each member purchases an equal stock share in the business and is entitled to an equal vote. The Board of Directors is responsible for setting the direction of the Co-op, hiring key employees and managing their progress. They meet quarterly if not more often based on the bylaws.

We are a community owned and operated Co-op focusing on enhancing the economic, environmental, social and nutritional health of our local communities through the sales and distribution of sustainable, locally produced and prepared foods and non-food items via a web based ordering system.

All profits that are generated by the Co-op are used for the benefit of the members. The Board determines whether to put those monies back into the business and/or to pay a patronage fee to members.

There are four main values that we refer to for everything we do; Community, Sustainability, Integrity, and Openness. We strive to also focus on three key benefits to all members; Quality, Value, and Convenience. Most of these are inclusive of the National Cooperative Principals that we have pledged to follow, but we chose to prioritize some of them for our specific Co-op.

The definition of a cooperative is an autonomous association of persons united voluntarily to meet their common economic, social, and cultural needs and aspirations through a jointly-owned and democratically-controlled enterprise.

Idaho's Bounty has joined together to serve the growth and long term health of farmers, ranchers, chefs and market gardeners by developing a sustainable network that supports the promotion and distribution of organic, all-natural, and fair trade food to our region.

Cooperatives are based on the values of self-help, self-responsibility, democracy, equality, equity, and solidarity. In the tradition of their founders, cooperative members believe in the ethical values of honesty, openness, social responsibility, and caring for others. The principals are as follows.